By the way,
The works of women are symbolical
We sew, sew, prick our fingers, dull our sight, Producing what? A pair of slippers, sir,
To put on when you're weary—or a stool
To tumble over and vex you * * * curse that stool!
Or else at best, a cushion where you lean
And sleep, and dream of something we are not,
But would be for your sake Alas, alas!
This hurts most, this * * * that, after all,
we are paid
The worth of our work, perhaps

WORLD PEACE

I am the last man in the world to say that the succor which is given us from America is not in itself something to rejoice at greatly. But I also say that I can see more in the knowledge that America is going to win a right to be at the conference table when the terms of peace are discussed. It would have been a tragedy for mankind if America had not been there, and there with all her influence and power

D. LLOYD GEORGE—Speech, at the Meeting of American Residents in London April 12, 1917

<sup>1</sup> To Woodrow Wilson, the apparent failure, belongs the undying honor, which will grow with the growing centuries, of having saved the "little child that shall lead them yet" No other statesman but Wilson could have done it And he did it

GEN JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS—Letter Jan 8, 1921 Printed in N Y Evening Post, March 2, 1921

<sup>2</sup> It was the human spirit itself that failed at Paris It is no use passing judgments and making scapegoats of this or that individual statesman or group of statesmen Idealists make a great mistake in not facing the real facts sincerely and resolutely They believe in the power of the spirit, in the goodness which is at the heart of things, in the triumph which is in store for the great moral ideals of the race But this faith only too often leads to an optimism which is sadly and fatally at variance with actual results It is the realist and not the idealist who is generally justified by events We forget that the human spirit, the spirit of goodness and truth in the world, is still only an infant crying in the night, and that the struggle with darkness is as yet mostly an unequal struggle

Paris proved this terrible truth once more It was not Wilson who failed there, but humanity itself It was not the statesmen that failed, so much as the spirit of the peoples behind them

<sup>3</sup> Rules of conduct which govern men in their relations to one another are being applied in an ever-increasing degree to nations The battlefield as a place of settlement of disputes is gradually yielding to arbitral courts of justice

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT—Dawn of World Peace In U S Bureau of Education Bulletin No 8 (1912)

<sup>4</sup> The development of the doctrine of international arbitration, considered from the standpoint of its ultimate benefits to the human race, is the most vital movement of modern times In its relation to the well-being of the men and women of this and ensuing generations, it exceeds in importance the proper solution of various economic problems which are constant themes of legislative discussion or enactment

And his gods they are shaped in his image and mirror his needs

That he worships his own desire

D R P MARQUIS (Don Marquis)—The God-Maker, Man

<sup>16</sup> For all of the creeds are false, and all of the creeds are true,

And low at the shrines where my brothers bow,

 But is worthy some worship of mine,
 Not too hot with a gross belief,

This is the Will of the Yukon,—Lo, how she

<sup>20</sup> There's a land where the mountains are nameless
And the rivers all run God knows where,
There are lives that are erring and aimless,
And deaths that just hang by a hair,
There are hardships that nobody reckons,
There are valleys unpeopled and still,
There's a land—oh, it beckons and beckons,
And I want to go back—and I will

INDEXES

I certainly think that the best book in the world would owe the most to a good index, and the worst book, if it had but a single good thought in it, might be kept alive by it HORACE BINNEY—To S Austin
Albione

So essential did I consider an index to be to every book, that I proposed to bring a bill into Parliament to deprive an author who publishes a book without an index of the privilege of copyright, and, moreover, to subject him for his offense to a pecuniary penalty
LORD CAMPBELL—Lives of the Chief Justices of England Preface to Vol III

An index is a necessary implement * * * Without this, a large author is but a labyrinth without a clue to direct the readers within
FULLER—Worthies of England

<sup>4</sup>
The index tells us the contents of stories and directs to the particular chapters
MASSINGER and FIELD—
Fatal Dowry Act IV Sc 1

<sup>5</sup>
How index-learning turns no student pale,
Yet holds the eel of science by the tail
POPE—Dunciad Bk I L 279

That roars so loud and thunders in the index
Hamlet Act III Sc 4 L 53

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large
Tronius and Cressida Act I Sc 3 L 343.

CONCORDANCE TO QUOTATIONS

NOTE—The indexed word is usually found in the phrase, indicated by its initial letter When not found there it is to be understood that the phrase begins with the indexed word

In general old spelling is not followed, but all words will be found under the correct form This is the case with dialect, save when the spelling is so well known that the searcher would otherwise be misled As the space allowed is often not adequate for a full phrase, unimportant words are omitted in order to convey the idea, although no word is changed

The small black-faced figures that follow the page numbers indicate the numerical order of the quotation on the page.
